

For Hector

Fort Pienc

Fort Pienc (Catalan pronunciation: [ˈfɔr piˈɛŋ]) is a neighborhood in the Eixample district of Barcelona, Catalonia (Spain). Its name stems from a former military fortification which existed there until the 19th century called Fort Pius, Pienc is an adjective in Catalan meaning related to the name Pius. There's been a strong Chinese presence in the area since the 2000s (decade). The Arc de Triomf is the main attraction in the area, located in Passeig de Lluís Companys-Passeig de Sant Joan, while L'Auditori is an important concert hall. The National Theatre of Catalonia is another of its cultural centres, as is the General Archive of the Crown of Aragon, near Parc de l'Estació del Nord. The General Catalana de Electricidad building is a fine piece of modernisme or local art nouveau architecture. La Monumental is the only extant bullring in the city.

Full Article ↗ (<https://en.wikipedia.org/?curid=23241872>)

Museu de la Xocolata

Museu de la Xocolata (Catalan for "Museum of Chocolate") is a private museum in Barcelona, Catalonia, Spain, owned by the Gremi de Pastisseria de Barcelona (the city pastry-makers' guild). The museum opened in 2000, at Carrer Comerç 36, in El Born, Ciutat Vella, on the ground level of an old barracks. Many of the displays are chocolate sculptures, including various well-known Barcelona buildings, and illustrations from various stories.

Full Article ↗ (<https://en.wikipedia.org/?curid=10859040>)

Òmnium Cultural

Òmnium Cultural (Catalan pronunciation: [ˈɔmniəm kuɫtuˈɾat]) is an independent association based in Barcelona (Catalonia). It was originally created to promote the Catalan language and spread Catalan culture. Over the years it has increased its political nature and as of 2012 has evolved to Catalan self-determination positions

Full Article ↗ (<https://en.wikipedia.org/?curid=4121462>)
